

Opening movie has a touch of spice

IT will be all Greek to most, so English subtitles are included.

The annual Greek Film Festival is on again, this year with organisers promising the best line-up ever.

Festival manager James Owen said it was rewarding to be able to bring the films to a wider audience.

"It's a very proud community and one of our missions is to get the culture out there," Mr Owen said.

With up to 150,000 people of Greek descent living in Sydney, Mr Owen said this city had one of the highest Greek populations in the world.

"It's great to be producing something so successful for the community," Mr Owen said.

There are 16 films in the agenda this year, from comedies and dramas to classics and the more controversial, there should be

■ INITIATIVE: Greek orthodox community
 ■ WHEN: Films will run from September 9 to 22.
 ■ WHERE: Palace Norton Street Cinemas, Leichhardt.

■ DETAILS: Tickets essential for the launch go to www.greekfilmfestival.com.au something for everyone in this 12th annual event.

The hugely successful Touch of Spice will launch the event next Thursday.

"It would be great to see people outside of the Greek community coming to the event," Mr Owen said.
